للتدرب على الأسئلة الفعلية بالاستيب

الهدف الأساسي هو التدرب والتعلم من الاخطاء

خطوات التدرب:

- 1- فضي نفسك ٣ ساعات متواصلة على الأقل بحيث تكون جاهز ومصصح.
- 2- ابدأ بالقسم الاول مع مؤقت، وحل الأسئلة بطريقة مماثلة للاختبار الفعلي
- 3- اذا السؤال صعب خمن الإجابة واستمر، الى انت تنتهي
- 4- بعد الانتهاء من القسم، استمر للقسم اللي بعده، بدون انتظار او وقوف.
- 5- بعد الانتهاء من الأقسام، تاكد من اجاباتك، واحسب درجتك من 100
- 6- خذ راحة، وراجع كل الأخطاء

Instructions

Read the following passages, then choose the best answer to each of the questions that follow and mark it on your answer sheet.

Passage 1

- 1) A couple of weeks ago I was unfortunate enough to get stung by both a bee and a hornet while working in the garden. My arm swelled up, so off to a clinic I went. The clinic gave me cream to put on the bites and an antihistamine. The next day the swelling was getting progressively worse, so my husband said I should see my regular doctor. I made an appointment for that afternoon. He said my arm was infected and gave me an antibiotic. He also said that the next time I got stung I should put a penny on the bite for fifteen minutes. I thought to myself, if there ever is a next time I'll follow through on his suggestion.
- 2) Well that night my niece got stung by two bees. When she came over to swim I looked at the bite and it had already started to swell. Immediately I thought of my doctor's advice. Off I went to get a penny and taped it to her arm for fifteen minutes. The next morning, there was no sign of a bite. Wow, were we surprised! But we decided she just wasn't allergic to the sting.
- 3) Well, guess what happened again on Saturday afternoon? I was helping my neighbor in her flower garden and I got bit again two times by a hornet on my left hand. I promptly went into the house and taped two pennies to my bites and then sat and sulked for 15 minutes. The penny took the sting out of the bite immediately, but I wasn't sure if it would stop the swelling. While I was doctoring my stings, the hornets were attacking my neighbor and she got bit on the thumb. Again, the penny.

The next morning I could only see the spot where I had been stung. There was no redness or swelling at all. I went over to see my neighbor and hers was the same. She couldn't even tell where she had been bitten.

- 4) The doctor certainly knew what he was talking about when he said that somehow the copper in the penny counteracts the usual effects of the bite. My suggestion to you is to keep a few copper coins on hand. I know in some countries there are no coins made from copper. If that's the case in your country, why not save some pennies on your next visit to America or ask friends if they have some. And who knows, maybe the copper is good for bites of insects other than bees, hornets and wasps. It's worth a try!

Questions

21. What stung the writer?
 - A. A snake and a hornet.
 - B. A wasp and a bee.
 - C. A hornet and a bee.
 - D. A bee and a spider.

Passage 2

- 1) Delhi residents are under siege by monkeys due to a shortage of trappers who could free the people from the simian menace, reports said on Tuesday. Many residents have barricaded their houses with grills and wire mesh to keep the marauding simians from looking for a meal from their refrigerators, The Times of India newspaper reported.
- 2) A woman told the newspaper that she had to spend hours at a stretch in her living room with the kitchen locked to keep the monkeys away. "You feel chained down as you can't keep the doors and windows open. At times it seems as if we are inside a cage and the monkeys are like visitors to a zoo," she said. As a result, many people keep their refrigerators and water tanks locked and are even afraid to dry their clothes in the open lest the simians rip them to bits, the newspaper said.
- 3) "There is a dearth of monkey trappers not only in the city but the whole of northern India. There has been no response to a notice inviting monkey trappers that we had put in papers," a city official said.

Instructions

Read the following passage, then choose the best answer to each of the questions that follow and mark it on your answer sheet.

Passage

- 1) The title of an interesting article in The New York Times (May 19, 2001) is the question, 'If Richer Isn't Happier, What Is?' In the article David Leonhardt explores two common ideas that we all tend to have – but two ideas that don't exactly fit together. Although most of us unthinkingly consider both ideas to be true, when we stop and put the two ideas side by side we have a problem. The two ideas contradict each other, thus both of them can't be true. Here they are: a.) The more money people have, the happier they will be. b.) Money can't buy happiness. Do you believe both statements are true? If so, how do you reconcile the apparent contradiction?
- 2) Mr. Leonhardt, in searching for an answer, explores the way in which economists and psychologists have approached this issue. Economists have traditionally not seen the necessity of conducting surveys. They have assumed that the richer a person, a family or a country is, the more they can buy and therefore the happier they will be. Thus, there is no need for surveys or research. Nowadays many people take possessions for granted that, before World War II, could only have been owned by the wealthy elite. Some examples of things that we probably all would assume add to someone's happiness are second and third cars, international vacations and pursuing an education abroad.

- 3) However, sociologists and psychologists are finding that this isn't necessarily true. Up to a certain point, it seems to be true. But then, another principle comes into play. That is, the more money people have and the more things they can buy, the greater and greater their desires become. For example, a man buys a new car. He is happy with his new car. Then he starts to have thoughts of a bigger, better, more expensive car. And so it goes with virtually any material possession. The more I have, the more I want – and it goes on endlessly with happiness being only of short duration until once again a new aspiration appears. This is known as the 'hedonistic treadmill' in the literature of 'happiness researchers' who are still exploring this field.
- 4) In the meantime, you and I may react to these findings by wishing that we had a chance to more fully experience the unhappiness at the upper levels of the hedonistic treadmill!! But perhaps another question should be asked: At what point of becoming richer does unhappiness outweigh happiness? Are you a volunteer in an experiment to find the answer?

Questions

41. What does Mr. Leonhardt's article explore?
- A. What rich really means.
B. How the rich are happy.
C. How much money the rich have.
D. What money really means.
42. According to paragraph (1), why is it that most of us tend to believe two opposite ideas?
- A. We put the two ideas side by side.
B. We don't think about them thoroughly.
C. They are not contradictory in any way.
D. We reconcile both ideas immediately.

Model Test 2

43. According to paragraph (2), why have economists NOT felt the need to conduct surveys?

They have always considered that:

- A. the rich don't need to buy.
- B. unhappiness automatically means poor.
- C. surveys aren't reliable.
- D. buying things creates happiness.

44. According to paragraph (2), what used to be true about the possessions many of us take for granted today?

- A. They were only for the economically well off.
- B. They have always been necessary for happiness.
- C. They were taken from the rich during WW II.
- D. They became a little less important than before.

45. According to paragraph (2), what kinds of things do we usually consider important for happiness?

- A. Expensive vehicles, long vacations, and international insurance.
- B. Automobiles, extensive travel, and international education.
- C. Several cars, international businesses, and expensive schools.
- D. Luxury brands, international economy, and elite education.

46. What was true about education abroad before World War II?

- A. It used to be much less possible than it is now.
- B. Fewer wealthy people took advantage of it.
- C. It was a sign of an elite psychological pursuit.
- D. Poor people had fewer possessions because of it.

47. According to paragraph (3), what happens when people are able to own more and more things?

A point is reached where:

- A. great possessions result in an increase in happiness.
- B. owning more increases the desire to purchase more.
- C. the more one owns increases the level of satisfaction in life.
- D. great possessions result in longer periods of happiness.

48. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the word aspiration in paragraph (3)?

- A. possession
- B. success
- C. answer
- D. desire

49. According to paragraph (3), how do 'happiness researchers' refer to the phenomenon in the article?

They refer to it as:

- A. the hedonistic treadmill.
- B. the literature of happiness.
- C. sociological research.
- D. psychological research.

50. In paragraph (4), at what point of becoming richer does unhappiness become greater than happiness?

- A. When the market losses are too great.
- B. When the upper level lacks volunteers.
- C. Researchers haven't found the answer yet.
- D. It depends on the time for the experiment.

Instructions

Read the following passages, then choose the best answer to each of the questions that follow and mark it on your answer sheet.

Passage 1

- 1) A grasshopper spent the summer hopping about in the sun and singing to his heart's content. One day, an ant went hurrying by, looking very hot and weary. "Why are you working on such a lovely day?" asked the grasshopper. "I'm collecting food for the winter," said the ant, "and I suggest you do the same," and went off to help the other ants carry food to their storage area. They knew that food would not be available in the cold winter, so they were preparing for that time. But the grasshopper went on hopping and singing and thought to himself that the ants were foolish to waste such gorgeous sunny days doing unpleasant work. There's always tomorrow, he thought to himself.
- 2) When winter came the ground was covered with snow and it was very cold. Nothing was growing so there was nothing available for the grasshopper to eat. Since he was very hungry, he remembered the ants and went to their storage area. They had lots of food there and surely they would give him something to eat. At the storage area he spoke with the ant on duty and explained that there was no food and that he was very hungry. The ant told him he would have to go to the manager of the storehouse, so off the grasshopper went.
- 3) He presented his request to the manager who asked him what he had done all summer when the ants had worked long and hard to collect food for the winter. "I was busy hopping and singing," said the grasshopper. "Well," responded the manager ant, "while you were hopping and singing and having a great time all summer instead of working, didn't you realize that you wouldn't have anything to eat in the winter and would starve?"

Questions

61. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the phrase, to his heart's content?
 - A. As much as he wanted
 - B. Songs about the heart
 - C. For the sake of his heart
 - D. More than he can hold
62. In paragraph (1), what was the ant doing?
 - A. Enjoying a lovely sunny day.
 - B. Working slowly in the hot sun.
 - C. Gathering food for the cold season.
 - D. Going home with the other ants.
63. What did the grasshopper think about the ants? He thought that they:
 - A. should stop singing.
 - B. should work hard for the winter.
 - C. were doing pleasant work.
 - D. were wasting wonderful days.
64. There's always tomorrow is closest in meaning to which of the following?

- D. We need friends who can help us get necessities.

71. Did the manager give the grasshopper what he wanted?

- A. The passage doesn't give us the answer to that question.
- B. No, because he didn't work when he should have.
- C. Yes, only until things started growing again at the right time.
- D. Yes, only enough for one day so that he can work.

Passage 2

- 1) For traveling about on land, the chariot or the carriage necessarily depended on an animal to make it move. Usually the animal was a horse, but depending on the location and availability, the animal might be a donkey, a camel, an elephant or even a dog. The only alternatives (excluding royalty and the very rich who were often carried by other people in sedan chairs) were to walk or actually ride on the back of the animal, although it would be difficult to do so on a dog.
- 2) All of that drastically changed after the invention of the horseless carriage or automobile, known these days simply as the car. No animal is needed to make a car move. It makes itself move by power generated from the engine, resulting in the name automobile.
- 3) Thanks to the car, we can go from place to place with much more ease and get there much faster. Unfortunately, the exhaust fumes from the burning of the fuel that powers the engine is a significant factor in the contemporary problem of air pollution. Progress has been made, but at a price.

Questions

72. How did the common people travel before there were cars?

- A. Either in carriages or walking.
- B. Either by walking or in sedan chairs.
- C. By riding on dogs or horses.
- D. Being carried by others or walking.
